Taumarunui Tramping Club Stanton Memorial on Mt Ruapehu

10 Mar 2012

We will be walking in from the Top O Bruce car park. Transport cost $12.00.

The history: In 1931 fourteen Auckland University students set out from the Chateau to climb Ruapehu. The weather was fine. Blizzard conditions struck while the party was at the summit and visibility was nil. While descending the Whakapapa glacier, the students drifted across to the left and became hopelessly lost. The party split into several groups and spent between one and three nights on the mountain, still in blizzard conditions. All survived apart from Warwick Stanton, aged 18, who set off on the third day in an effort to get help. His body was found after three weeks, in the forest on a tributary of the Makatote. The large rock, with the plaque, known as the Stanton memorial, was where the party spent the first night. The walk will be off track for most of the day. There are excellent views of mountains, waterfalls and alpine vegetation.

Te Kuiti to Waitomo Walkway

This is a new walkway that follows farmland between Waitomo and Te Kuiti. It has good views of an area we have not been in before. It is a 6 hour medium-grade tramp. Expect hills with 150m ascents and descents. The track is steep sometimes, but it'll be one of our best pastoral outings. It pauses on top of high karsts to stare across the King Country's low agriculture, and tumbled limestone hills that rise to formidable volcanic summits – north to Pirongia, east to Pureora, and south to Ruapehu. Also, on the lowest point, the track enters the Pehitawa Forest.
